Work Station on Wheels

Director of Nursing Marie Ross demonstrates how a prescription's bar code is scanned to be accurately matched to the hospital patient's ID before the medicine is administered.

Danny Dvorak, RN, points out the wireless mouse and other features. Nurses use the Work Station on Wheels for making entries to patient charts they pull up for viewing right at the bedside.

What Is It?

Work Station on Wheels

Year Acquired:

2011

Use:

Work Stations on Wheels are laptop computers that are mounted onto a desk with wheels. Nurses pull their cart room to room. They use the laptop to update the patient's medical record right at the bedside rather than take notes by hand for later entry.

Features:

The workstation holds prescription medicine and has equipment for scanning prescriptions before they are given to patients. The moving laptop saves money. Instead of having a computer in every room, the workstations move room to room.
